

The Good Hair Guide to Wedding Hair

When it comes to making plans for your big day, there are always lots of things to consider. The date, the venue, who to invite, the invites, the colour scheme, the cake - not to mention the other fine details which make the day complete. For the bride, the most important and exciting part of the planning is deciding how they will look on their special day.

We wear our hair 24/7, 365 days a year and to most of us it is our crowning glory, topping off our final look for our day-to-day image, but when it comes to deciding on the look for our wedding day, that takes some special planning.

The first thing to decide on is the wedding dress as this can influence whether the hair should be worn up or down depending on the neckline or the detail at the back of the dress.

The next step is to look at pictures to get an idea of possible looks you are considering for hair and make-up and to collect images to show your wedding stylist and make-up artist.

Once you have a few options for consideration it is a good idea to book an appointment for a consultation prior to booking a trial date to discuss your chosen options ahead of your big day, as your hair may need some additional colour, texture or length enhancement to achieve your chosen look.

In the event that your hair is too short or fine to achieve your desired look, your stylist may need to add some temporary hair extensions which may need to be colour matched and sourced ahead of time.

Therefore, arranging a trial with your wedding stylist is essential as this gives you a clear idea of how you will look, avoids any disappointment, and eliminates additional stress on the day. It also gives your stylist a clear idea of what will be needed to achieve your look allowing for any changes to be made and determines how much time will be required on the day, as no bride wants to keep their groom waiting too long at the aisle.

Remember to bring your considered images, veil or any hair and jewellery accessories you may be considering with you on your trial day. Consider attending your trial with a close friend or family member for a second opinion and to share these special memories which all form part of your wedding story. Happy wedding planning!
